What financial services does ASCO offer?

ASCO holds an Australian Financial Services Licence (No. 470477). The licence authorisations allow ASCO to offer the following financial services to retail investors:

- Provide general financial product advice on securities; and
- Deal in securities.

Does ASCO provide personal financial advice to retail clients?

No. Any financial advice provided to you is general and has been prepared without taking into account your objectives, financial situation or needs. Before acting on information or deciding whether to acquire or hold a product, you should seek advice from your financial adviser and consider its appropriateness to your own objectives, financial situation or needs, and obtain a copy of the prospectus (or other applicable disclosure document) for that product.

How will I pay for the service?

ASCO will not charge you a fee for any general advice or information provided to you. If you purchase any securities in relation to which ASCO has provided you with general advice, through a broker or licensed financial adviser, you may be required to pay fees to those parties.

How are ASCO and its representatives remunerated?

ASCO provides investment management services to listed companies (LICs). Argo reimburses the operating costs that ASCO incurs in providing financial services. AGLI pays ASCO a management fee based on funds under management.

Fees paid to ASCO by the LICs are not linked to the outcome of any advice provided by ASCO through its employee and director representatives. These representatives are not paid any commission by ASCO or by any LIC for providing advice. Base salaries, bonuses and other benefits are paid by ASCO, and are based upon the achievement of predetermined corporate and personal objectives. Representatives of ASCO may hold directly or indirectly, securities in some or all of the LICs to which ASCO provides advice.

Compensation arrangements

ASCO has professional indemnity insurance cover in respect to the financial services which ASCO provides to its clients. The insurance covers claims in relation to the conduct of our past and present representatives. These arrangements comply with the requirements of section 912B of the Corporations Act 2001.
